

Social Work 501 B: Poverty and Inequality Winter 2016

Christopher Cambron
ccambron@uw.edu
SSW 018 (PhD Student Offices)

This course is a critical analysis of poverty and inequality, with an analytic and descriptive focus on measurement, processes of production and perpetuation, and public policy responses. It examines competing perspectives on the causes of poverty and inequality, the role of policy, and socioeconomic dimensions of stratification, including race, ethnicity, class, gender, immigration status, disability, age, sexual orientation and family structure.

This course builds upon historical and critical analysis content covered in the "Intellectual and Historical Foundations of Professional Social Work Practice" and links to policy advocacy and policy analysis material covered in policy practice sessions in the "Macro practice" sequence. Together, these courses offer a foundation in the historical, political, economic, and philosophical context of U.S. social welfare policy, familiarize students with current policy controversies, build skills in policy analysis and advocacy, and help students critically analyze competing perspectives on poverty and inequality, in preparation for socially just social work practice.

Course goals: To enable students to critically examine the dimensions, causes, consequences and perpetuation of poverty and inequality in the U.S.; to understand the role of policy in producing, maintaining, and alleviating poverty and inequality; and to offer a theoretical and analytic foundation for promoting social and economic justice.

Core Competencies

This course targets the following SSW foundation competencies and related practice behaviors:

Competency #3: Apply critical thinking to inform and communicate professional judgments.

3a. Use critical thinking to distinguish, evaluate, and integrate multiple sources of knowledge, including research-based knowledge, practice wisdom, and client/constituent experience.

3b.-e. Critically analyze models of b.) assessment, c.) prevention, d.) intervention, and e.) evaluation, especially in relation to their cultural relevance and applicability and their promotion of social justice.

Competency #4: Engage diversity and difference in practice.

4a. Recognize and articulate the ways in which social and cultural structures—including history, institutions, and values—oppress some identity groups while enhancing the privilege and power of dominant groups.

Competency #5: Advance human rights and social and economic justice.

5a. Understand and articulate the forms and mechanisms of oppression and discrimination and approaches to advancing social justice and human rights.

5b. Advocate for and engage in practices that address disparities and inequalities and advance human rights and social and economic justice.

Competency #6: Engage in research-informed practice and practice-informed research.

6c.-d. Use c.) qualitative and d.) quantitative research evidence to inform practice.

Competency #8: Engage in policy practice to advance social and economic well-being and to deliver effective social work services.

8a.-b. Use critical understanding of the history and current form of US social welfare and social service policies (e.g., institutions, governance, and financing) to a.) formulate policies and strategies that advance social and economic justice and b.) formulate policies and strategies that improve social service delivery.

Competency #9: Respond to contexts that shape practice.

9a. Continuously discover, appraise, and attend to changing locales, populations, scientific and technological developments, and emerging societal trends to provide culturally relevant services

Course Requirements and Grading

Readings: Our major text is Poverty in America by John Iceland (2013, University of California Press). Other readings are listed below and on our class website. Readings may be added or substituted during the quarter. Readings for most weeks are organized in two parts. The main readings are required for all seminar participants; they provide an overview of relevant concepts, current information on poverty and inequality, and alternative perspectives on the topic. Additional readings explore related topics in more depth. On most weeks students will select at least one additional reading to prepare for class. This will broaden our collective knowledge for class discussions and help you identify and explore potential paper topics. Optional readings are available for students who wish to explore selected issues in more depth.

Paper assignments: A series of written assignments will integrate class concepts and readings through analysis of a substantive area of research around poverty and inequality. Major assignments will be accompanied by assessment rubrics. Work submitted should be the student's original writing created in response to the assignment in question.

Written work should follow format guidelines on in the SSW Guidelines for Student Papers. Use a standard 12 point font (such as Garamond, Times or Arial, not Courier), double-space lines, and staple multiple-page assignments in the upper left-hand corner. Because of the time-frame of the course, the instructor may not have adequate time to comment on assignments turned in past the due date and students will not be able to reflect on comments. Late assignments will automatically lose one half point (0.5 on a 4.0 scale) per day.

Policy on plagiarism: The student conduct code of the University of Washington requires students to practice "high standards of academic and professional honesty and integrity." In addition, the School of Social Work's academic standards specify that students may be dismissed for "academic cheating, lying, or plagiarism." Students who are suspected of cheating or plagiarism will be confronted directly by the instructor, who will inform the program director and the assistant dean for student affairs. Instructors will not award credit for work that has been plagiarized. The instructor, director and director of student services will determine if the student's actions warrant disciplinary action, which may include probation or dismissal. Your program manual contains a more detailed explanation of plagiarism and suggestions for avoiding it.

Participation: Students are expected to attend all classes, do the assigned reading in advance of class, and participate in class discussions and exercises. Course format will include lecture, class discussion and small group discussion. We will be engaging with difficult issues that are likely to challenge our prior beliefs and opinions. It is our joint responsibility to maintain a classroom climate that tolerates diverse perspectives and treats all class participants with respect and dignity.

Participation and preparation are evaluated in class. If you must miss class, please notify your instructor before class if possible.

The quality of learning in this class will depend to a large extent on the quality of our classroom discussions and exercises. Students are expected to complete required readings for each class and to actively contribute to class discussions. Class participation will be graded based on the following format for discussion groups:

- (1) students will be assigned to discussion groups that will meet in class to discuss the main points/themes of the current weekly required readings and additional readings selected by each student;
- (2) groups will be given discussion questions and exercises designed to apply and integrate concepts in the readings, using poster board paper to illustrate their work;
- (3) we will reconvene as a full class and each group will be responsible for leading a full group discussion at least once during the quarter, presenting their work, posing additional questions that surface during their discussion, and facilitating a full class discussion;

For grading purposes, all groups will submit their poster board paper to the instructor at the end of class and all group members will receive credit. Students who miss class in which discussion groups meet can earn credit by turning in a 3 page reflection paper on the readings for that week.

Students are expected to engage in this small group exercise at least five times during the course of the winter quarter. Dates for student led discussion groups are listed in syllabus.

Grading: Numeric grades of 0-4.0 will be given according the following scale:

A/A-	4.0-3.5	Mastery of subject content, demonstration of critical analysis, creativity and/or complexity in completion of the assignment. The difference between an A and an A- is based on the degree to which these skills are demonstrated.
B+	3.4-3.1	Mastery of subject content beyond expected competency, but lacking in additional critical analysis, creativity, or complexity.
B	3.0-2.9	Mastery of subject content at level of expected competency; meets course expectations.
B-	2.8-2.7	Less than adequate competency, but demonstrates student learning and potential for mastery of subject content.
NC	2.6 or below	Significant areas need improvement to meet course expectations. Grades of 2.6 or below cannot be applied toward graduate degrees.

Assignments and activities are weighted as follows:

Participation: Discussion Groups & In Class	30
Preliminary writing assignments	25
Final paper	40
Peer presentation of key data and findings	5
<hr/> TOTAL	<hr/> 100

WHAT IF I NEED ACCOMODATIONS?

Access and Academic Accommodations

At the SSW we are committed to ensuring access to classes, course material, and learning opportunities for students with disabilities. Your experience in this class is important to us, and it is the policy and practice of the University of Washington to create inclusive and accessible learning environments consistent with federal and state law. If you experience barriers based on a disability or temporary health condition, please seek a meeting with DRS to discuss and address them. If you have already established accommodations with DRS, please communicate your approved accommodations to your instructor at your earliest convenience so we can discuss your needs in this course.

Disability Resources for Students (DRS) offers resources and coordinates reasonable accommodations for students with disabilities and/or temporary health conditions. Reasonable accommodations are established through an interactive process between you, your instructor(s) and DRS. If you have not yet established services through DRS, but have a temporary health condition or permanent disability that requires accommodations (this can include but not limited to; mental health, attention-related, learning, vision, hearing, physical or health impacts), you are welcome to contact DRS at 206-543-8924 or uwdrs@uw.edu or disability.uw.edu

ACADEMIC MISCONDUCT

The student conduct code of the University of Washington requires students to practice "high standards of academic and professional honesty and integrity." In addition, the School of Social Work's academic standards specify that students may be dismissed for "academic cheating, lying, or plagiarism." Students who are suspected of cheating or plagiarism will be confronted directly by the instructor, who will inform the program director and the assistant dean for student affairs. Instructors will not award credit for work that has been plagiarized. The instructor, director and director of student services will determine if the student's actions warrant disciplinary action, which may include probation or dismissal. Your program manual contains a fuller explanation of plagiarism and suggestions for avoiding it.

Final Paper Assignment – UPDATED 1/22/16

A1 JAN 18	No more than 2 double-spaced pages, describe the inequality or poverty-related condition you will investigate this quarter. Motivate your topic: Tell us what is the empirical question, why it’s important, and what data will you use to describe it. Include a graph of these data if you like (you will be making one for A2)
A2 FEB 5	No more than 4 double-spaced pages and include the following elements: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • A brief introduction outlining the purpose and key points of the paper, • A concise statement of the inequality or condition to be investigated, • A discussion of relevant context and definitions of important concepts, • An original table or graph using data from your research showing the comparison, • A discussion of what it reveals. Support all statements of fact with references to academic, governmental or reputable non-governmental sources of information. Use language that clearly documents the situation without eliciting emotion or action. Let the facts speak for themselves.
A3 FEB 26	Explanations for why poverty or inequalities exist may draw on individual or structural arguments. Such explanations inform and justify policy responses. The second part of the paper asks for two explanatory frameworks for the inequality or poverty-related condition examined in Part I and theory-informed implications for policy. Analysis drawn from readings for this course, the Intellectual Foundations (Hub) course, or external sources may be useful in developing this argument. Show the relevance and potentially useful implications from each perspective and avoid “straw person” comparisons in which one perspective is obviously flawed. Approximately 4 to 6 double-spaced pages and include the following elements: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • A brief summary of two explanatory frameworks (1 individual, 1 structural), referencing scholars who developed and/or applied the perspective to issues of poverty and inequality; • A discussion of the relevance of the two frameworks for explaining the inequality or condition demonstrated by your research and their relationship to one another (e.g., competing, complementary or alternative explanations); • A more detailed application of each perspective to your research finding; and A discussion of the implications of each for policy: What policy goals would be implied by each perspective? How might these be achieved? (i.e., what types of benefits, services, conditions? Who would be eligible and on what basis? etc.)
A4 MAR 6	Imagine you have been selected by a policy group you work with to present information to a local or state policy maker. You have only a few short minutes to describe your issue, why they should care, and one option of what they can do. Anticipate at least one question they might have for you. Leave them with a 1 page policy brief as a reminder of your conversation. For class, prepare a maximum 5 minute summary of your research this quarter to present to the class, along with a 1 page handout to be distributed in class. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Describe the inequality or disparity you examined, including one key figure (graph or table) that captures the essential issue. • Motivate your topic - tell us why it is important or we should care, who is impacted? • What should we do about it? Provide one policy idea that is a direct outgrowth of one of the explanatory frameworks you used in A3.
A5 MAR 14	The final product should be no less than 9 pages of text excluding references and the cover page. The maximum page limit is 15 pages for all parts included. Use a standard 12 point font (such as Times Roman or Arial), double-space the text, use 1 inch margins. Follow APA style and format guidelines as found in the SSW Guidelines for Student Papers. Integrate all parts of A2 and A3. Make sure your paper flows. Also include a minimum 1 page social justice analysis of each policy implication.

Grading Rubric for Final Paper

Demographic description

Demographic information lacking, incorrect or fails to describe basic elements of the situation.	Key demographic issues defined, situation described using demographic details from reputable sources.	Demographic definitions and description of key dimensions clearly link to theory and policy. Facts documented using appropriate sources and discussion of potential errors as needed.

Theory, policy and social justice

Lack of analysis. Under-developed theories, vague policy discussion, lack of fit between theory and policy. Unsupported or under-reasoned opinions.	Two specific and distinct theories described, applied and linked to relevant policies. Policies described. Social justice implications considered.	Theories and policies thoughtfully described, linked, compared or contrasted and critiqued on basis of specific social justice concepts. Documentation as needed.

Incorporation of concepts from class lectures and reading

Unrelated to course topics, unable to distinguish major course ideas.	References made to readings when topics match. Greater use of class concepts would have strengthened paper.	Used course concepts thoughtfully to strengthen and address complexities of argument.

Clarity of argument

Paper focused on one central idea, but thesis is unclear. Parts of paper (sentences, paragraphs, sections) not related to key ideas.	Paper focused on one central argument. Paper structure clear and consistent with argument.	Central argument clearly stated and supported including consideration of complexities. Paper structure—paragraphs, sub-headings, organization—reinforce argument.

Quality of editing

Errors in citation, grammar, spelling, punctuation, syntax or tone impeded reading.	A few writing errors, awkward syntax, or discernable APA errors. Tone generally appropriate.	Excellent editing for APA citation style, grammar, spelling, punctuation and syntax. Tone supports purpose.
